THE PROJECT

WHY INTERAGETION?

The opportunities to have social meeting points between people of different generations are limited, which results in a great distance between these generations. This dialogue gap arises, among other things, because of the social and thinking differences between younger generations and adults or older people.

Also, this lack of encounter also occurs in closer environments, such as the family unit, the school or the neighbourhood community. The lack of understanding between different generations is very visible within the family, where adults often fail to find a way to communicate with their children, and where children are not able to empathise and recognise the dedication of their parents.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

Taking into account that there are problems of communication and lack of common spaces between different generations, both at community and family level, we intend to put the following solutions on the table:

First solution

Bringing together a group of youth workers from different countries who can exchange their visions, experiences and realities around the phenomenon of intergenerational dialogue. Each participant will be able to give briefings on this issue, and learn from others about different aspects of experienced youth workers in this field.

Second solution

Generating a real space for intergenerational dialogue. Through this action the participants will experience how to create, manage and maintain spaces for intergenerational dialogue in a local area. In this way, the project will be able to see its results sustained over time.

Third solution

Training our soft skills, not only to learn more about them, but also to give the participants practical examples that they can apply in their daily work.
